LOVE. SEX. POWER.

Two teenage boys run away from their abusive homes and wander the streets of Los Angeles, hungry and homeless, until they're picked up by a stranger. Unknown to the boys, the stranger's mansion in the Hollywood Hills is actually a high-class brothel. The boys fall in love with each other as they are lured into a world of drugs, power and prostitution.

About the Author:

In addition to her work as an author, Eowyn Wood performs editing for Crooked Hills Publishing and works at a non-profit AIDS organization. After five years in Los Angeles, Wood relocated to Portland, Oregon, where she now resides.

Target audience: General public, as well as Goth and underground culture; gay/bisexual readers; music enthusiasts—especially fans of the groups whose lyrics are used within the novel; and readers of Anne Rice, JT LeRoy and Scott Heim.

“Deeply engrossing, taut and focused. Wood has a knack for telling a story.”

Jason Tougaw, PhD, author of Strange Cases: The Medical Case History and the British Novel

“Unflinching—and sometimes disturbing—exploration of shattered innocence and young love. Wood is a brave and talented writer.” Derek Ladd, author of Earth is a Third World Country and Other Stories
